

General hint: To see all and cheap possibilities use search-engines, depending on your country: kiwi, megaflieger, opodo, whichbudget, jetcost, momondo, greitai. It's advised to use such search-engines only to get the information, NOT for booking, because you have to book your bicycle too and that can cause problems using the search engines. Book directly at the website of the founded airline! At some airlines simply with a "click", at others by phone. Typical price for a bike is about 30 Euro inside Europe, and ~100-150 USD to South America. To get knowledge which airlines fly to one or another airport it is advisable also to visit websites of corresponding airports.

A Guide to the Most Accessible Airports in Patagonia gives a concise information about the flight options.

At first, you have to find a flight to Santiago de Chile or Buenos Aires. There are many different possibilities. Air France, British Airways, Iberia, Alitalia, Latam, Aerolineas Argentinas, and some other airlines operate the direct flights from Europe.

If you plan to join the ride at the beginning, it is more convenient to take a flight to Santiago de Chile, and then to the Puerto Montt. Local flights inside Chile and Argentina are rather cheap, but much more expensive between the two countries.

If you have not enough time for the whole ride, we would recommend combining the following sections of the route:

- February 23 – March 09. Flights from Balmaceda airport (40 km from Coyhaique).
- March 09 – March 26. Flights from El Calafate.
- March 27 – till the end. Flights from Punta Arenas.

You can finish the ride at the other points as well. For example, after 21 days of cycling you can take a ferry from Caleta Tortel and finish your trip in Puerto Natales.

You can use also a bus network to reach some places in Patagonia. Check the following sites for the bus schedules in Chile and Argentina:

- <https://www.checkmybus.com/chile>
- <https://www.checkmybus.com/argentina>

On the <https://www.rome2rio.com/> you can find different options for all types of transportation between two locations.

If you will join us only for some part of the ride the following table of airports located at (or near) our route can be useful when planning arrival or departure:
